

- The caucus site was physically accessible to people with disabilities and had a path of travel from the parking lot to the entrance that was clear of barriers?
- There is public transportation available to provide individuals a way to reach the caucus site?
- The notice for the caucus included an offer to provide materials in alternate format, such as computer disk, large print or audio tape for individuals who are blind or hearing-impaired?
- The event notice included an offer to provide accommodation for disability, contact information for obtaining the accommodation and that said accommodation could be provided where reasonable?
- The caucus provided sign language interpreters, assistive listening equipment and other accommodations necessary so that persons who are deaf or hard of hearing may fully participate in the event?
- The caucus site had clear signage to indicate the entrance, restroom facilities and parking areas or had volunteers in key areas to give directions?
- A microphone or other method to amplify speech was used during the caucus?
- The caucus room was set up with plenty of space for wheelchair access?
- Respectful language was used in party communications when referring to people with disabilities, avoiding antiquated terms such as “wheelchair-bound” and stereotyping references to people with psychiatric, intellectual and other disabilities?